 TITLE : The Reaction of Hexamethylenetetramine with Nitric Oxide
 ORIG. PUB. : Arkhiv Farmats, 8, No 4-5, 257-259 (1958)
 ABSTRACT : The reaction of mixtures of NO₂ and O₂ with a solution of hexamethylenetetramine (I) in CHCl₃, gives a white crystalline precipitate, a molecular compound of I with NO₂ and HCl, insoluble in most organic solvents and soluble in water. An aqueous solution of the product has a pH of 4 and gives a positive test for Cl⁻ and NO₂.

Abstract: In the first place, diet should not lead to malnutrition. Indications for restriction of food fats are stricter than necessary. Caloric decrease or removal of certain ingredients from food should be very carefully followed. Smaller and more frequent meals very often have a better effect than careful selection of food which can be unwholesome for the patient. 8 Western references.
